Remove That Bushel Basket

Does it sound too much like Christmas to say, "Lord, give us the peace that the world cannot give"? Well, let's say it anyway.

General MacArthur has issued the formal terms of surrender to the North Korean armies. President Truman has currently arranged to meet MacArthur to discuss the situation. Supposing that these are the preliminary steps towards cessation of hostilities, will we make this peace any more peaceful than we did after World War II?

From many sources we hear of the diplomatic blunders of the San Francisco conference. But we show little evidence that we have learned from our errors. Granted that we realize that the brotherhood of man is the basis for world government, without the Fatherhood of God, it is inadequate. Granted that we have prayed and are praying. Unless you are hoping for a mighty wind from heaven, this policy is also inadequate.

Printer's Ink Can Be White

Into the field of journalism last week stepped a new publication, The Sun Herald, a small daily newspaper published in Kansas City, Mo., by a group of Catholic journalists who form the Art Editor_____Patricia Johann Apostolic Press association. Its aim, as pointed out in its first Proof Editors issue which appeared Oct. 10, is to present the truth and to interpret current world events in the light of Christian values.

Why is The Sun Herald such a novelty in the world today? Primarily because it has been established to tell the truth. It seems ridiculous that a newspaper must advertise that it "tells the truth." But today, where truth and principle are too often disregarded for what "I think" or what "I want," The Sun Herald is perhaps unique.

Its policy is not tied to any political party. It carries no advertising and therefore it does not have to bow to the dictates of large advertisers. For these two reasons it can concern itself with its prime objective, to present news truthfully.

The Sun Herald is not venturing into journalism for any material gain but rather for the spiritual profit of its readers. It is convinced that man can be a spiritual force by proclaiming his "for fun" is done in snatches—on trains, while truthful convictions.

The Sun Herald is a courageous venture and one that should homework's-all-done evenings. meet the support of all Christians.

THE LITTLE WORLD OF DON CAMILLO

Fiction in a pleasant and refreshing style is found in The Little World of Don Camillo, written by Giovani Guareschi and published by Pellegrini and Cudahy. The September issue of Harper's Magazine carries a brief, but interesting review of Guareschi's book. In the review Katherine Gauss Jackson says: "... here they will find the bitter and inevitable dissension between Catholicism and communism transformed into hilarious and charming personal skirmishes between the Catholic priest and the communist mission meetings in which ideas and thought the commission meetings in which ideas and the commission meeting in the commissio

THE LIPTON STORY

Alec Waugh has put in print, for the world to share, the color and excitement of the life of a British sportsman and merchant, Thomas Lipton. This centennial biography, The Lipton Story, published by Doubleday, relates the true success story of a boy born of common origin who, before he was forty, became a millionaire and sports ambassador to the world. Mr. Waugh is a native of Britain. Travel to the Far East, South Seas and West Indies provided material for his early series of books, which included Hot Countries.

THE LINCOLN CIRCLE

Among the Lincoln stories are many biographies about the men in the circle of Abraham Lincoln's associates before and during the time of his fame. One published in the last few years was Mentor Graham, co-authored by D. F. Nichols of Lincoln, Illinois, who is not only a personal friend, but one of the nation's leading authorities on Lincoln. The latest addition to the biographical works is one which parallels Mr. Nichol's life of Lincoln's teacher and reveals the life of John G. Nicolay, Mr. Lincoln's offcial secretary.

Lincoln's Secretary, published by Longman, Green and company, was written by Helen Nicolay about her father. Aside from the pleasure to be taken from this volume, a student of Lincoln will carry away new information incorporated in the book from the private notes of Mr. Nicolay to which the author alone has had access. Great human interest is aroused in the reader by John Nicolay who was a giver of self. He postponed and gave up much of his own personal life in order to assist "The Titan," Mr. Lincoln.

is not confined solely to study, Rose Nederhiser has learned to her sorrow. Rosie bought a can of concentrated frozen orange juice a while ago and neglected to read the warning on the can: "Keep in a cool place!" So the orange juice had been reposing on her dresser a few days when one afternoon Rosie came into her room, gasped-and wondered wildly if some frustrated artist had decided to redecorate her walls, ceiling, furniture, and floor with an orange-stippled effect. Yes, the concentrated stuff had exploded and was now stickily distributed over every square inch of space. So that's what those frozen orange juice ads mean that bellow, "It's bursting with vitamins!"

As seniors rattled off SLC, CCP, NSA, SAF, NFCCS, etc., the old grads blinked and found the new alphabet soup of their college hard to swallow, much less digest, unless it were doled out in very small sips. The SAF members did discover, however, that the alumnae certainly can "mind their P's and Q's," even if the other letters stay pretty mysterious.
